Melvin Mark Brokerage Company Welcomes Back Paul Andrews

PORTLAND, Ore. — After a three-year absence, Paul Andrews has rejoined Melvin Mark Brokerage Company as a commercial real estate broker.

Andrews first joined the company in 2010 as a real estate advisor and broker, specializing in creative office properties. In 2013, an opportunity to live and work in San Francisco drew him south to California. He polished his skills with Boston Properties, one of the largest owners, managers, and developers of first-class office properties in the United States, and the largest commercial landlord in San Francisco.

He was a leasing representative for the company's three million square foot Embarcadero Square property, and for approximately two million square feet of office park space in South San Francisco, San Jose and Mountain View.

"It is great to have Paul back," said Jim Mark, CEO, Melvin Mark Companies. "He's sharpened his skills over the past few years and brings real depth to our broker bench. He made a lot of new connections during his time with Boston Properties, which helps to broaden our reach along the West Coast."

Andrews is a 2008 graduate of Santa Clara University's Leavey School of Business, and a graduate of the National Outdoor Leadership School. In 2012, he completed the Portland Business Alliance's Leadership Portland program. He also sat on the Oregon Historical Society Board of Directors prior to leaving Portland.
